Course Description, Prerequisites, Corequisites:

Students investigate key aspects of professionalism in the management of recreation. Students explore the characteristics of human services professionals and then apply those characteristics to the practice of recreation leadership. Using contemporary, recreation-based case studies, and building on foundational principles of the field students develop a framework for professional thinking and ethical decision-making.

Registration in this course is restricted to students admitted to the Bachelor of Recreation Management and the Diploma in Recreation Leadership.

Prerequisite(s): Completion of a minimum of 60 credits including a minimum "C" grade in six credits of university-transferable English or communications; and a minimum "C" grade in RECR 1160; or permission of the department.

Learning Outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to...

- List and describe key characteristics of a professional in the field of recreation
- Reflect upon and analyze their own practice as professionals to improve their performance in recreation contexts.
- Create a basic framework for ethical and professional decision-making in recreation management
- Describe and apply the effective application of consequence, rule and virtue-based ethical theories to a variety of recreation-related case studies and personal experiences.
- Describe and apply the basics of professional communication
- Explain key human resource and budgeting practices essential to management
