Course Description

---

“We are in great haste to construct a magnetic telegraph from Maine to Texas; but Maine and Texas, it may be, have nothing important to communicate”
- Henry David Thoreau, Walden (84)

This course is a survey of American literature, spanning the Early National period (1780-1830) to the present. We will use the phrase “the old, weird America” (coined by Greil Marcus in reference to the Anthology of American Folk Music) as a point of access for considering the peculiarity—that is, both the uniqueness and the strangeness—of U.S. history and literature. We will place particular emphasis on the ways that emergent communication technologies (print, telegraphy, radio, television, the internet, etc.) have both mediated connections and sown dramatic, sometimes violent divisions between people throughout the history of the republic.
